

COMMONWEALTH

A Journal of Political Science

2003

Volume 12

ISSN 0890-2410

COMMONWEALTH: A Journal of Political Science

EDITOR: Gerard J. Fitzpatrick, Ursinus College

ASSOCIATE EDITORS: Thomas J. Baldino, Wilkes University
Donald G. Tannenbaum, Gettysburg College

MANAGING EDITOR: Harold Cox, Wilkes University

EDITORIAL REVIEW BOARD

Aryeh Botwinick
Temple University

Michael J. Malbin
State University of NY, Albany

M. Margaret Conway
University of Florida

Harvey C. Mansfield, Jr.
Harvard University

Roger H. Davidson
University of Maryland

Kenneth F. Mott
Gettysburg College

Jean B. Elshtain
University of Chicago

Craig N. Murphy
Wellesley College

Richard F. Fenno
University of Rochester

Steven A. Peterson
Pennsylvania State University

Marianne Githens
Goucher College

Mark P. Petracca
University of California, Irvine

Susan W. Hammond
American University

H. Mark Roelofs
New York University

Samuel Krislov
University of Minnesota

Bruce M. Russett
Yale University

G. Calvin Mackenzie
Colby College

J. David Singer
University of Michigan

Contents

Volume 12	2003
	ISBN 0890-2410
Idealism, Realism, and the Categorical Imperative in Kant's Perpetual Peace
Gordon P. Henderson	1
The Five-Year Effect of NAFTA on Pennsylvania: An Analysis of Export Data
Paul G. Kengor and R. C. Phinney	27
State Influence in the Presidential Selection Process: Assessing Pennsylvania's Non-Participation in the Frontloading Trend
James E. Vike	51
Disappearing Democrats: Rethinking Partisanship Within Pennsylvania's Electorate
Berwood Yost	77
SPECIAL FEATURE
Looking Back on the Legislative Modernization Movement in Pennsylvania: Remarks of Herbert Fineman, Former Speaker of the Pennsylvania House of Representatives
Introduction and Commentary by Michael Cassidy	87

About the Authors

Michael Cassidy has over 25 years of service with the PA House of Representatives, two of them as a Representative from Blair County in 1977-78. He received a B.A. in Political Science from Pennsylvania State University and is currently enrolled in the graduate program in American Studies at Penn State-Harrisburg. His research interests include the development of American legislatures and Pennsylvania politics. He has moderated the "Pennsylvania Politics Roundtable" at the Pennsylvania Political Science Association annual meetings since 1997.

Gordon P. Henderson, Ph.D., is an associate professor of government and politics at Widener University. He received his doctoral degree from Purdue University. His teaching and research focus on the theory and practice of constitutional democracy.

Paul G. Kengor, Ph.D., is an associate professor of political science at Grove City College. He received his master's degree in international affairs from the School of International Service at American University and his doctorate in public and international affairs from the University of Pittsburgh's Graduate School of Public and International Affairs. His research interests include the presidency and foreign policy. His forthcoming book, God and Ronald Reagan, will be published in 2004 by HarperCollins.

R. C. Phinney is a policy analyst at the Shenango Institute for Public Policy, a think-tank focused on local and state policy issues located in western Pennsylvania. His articles on the North American Free Trade Act (NAFTA) have appeared in several Pennsylvania publications, including the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette and the Harrisburg Patriot-News.

James E. Vike, Ph.D., is an assistant professor of government and politics and director of the Master of Public Administration program at Widener University. He received his doctoral degree from the Maxwell School of Citizenship and Public Affairs at Syracuse University. His research interests include the presidency and bureaucratic politics.

Berwood Yost is the Director of the Center for Opinion Research of the Floyd Institute for Public Policy at Franklin and Marshall College. He received his Master's Degree in Political Science from Temple University and is currently a Ph.D. candidate there. His recent research has focused on crime victimization and victim services, smoking and health, and public attitudes toward politics and political campaigns.

Acknowledgments

COMMONWEALTH is published annually under the authorization of the Pennsylvania Political Science Association (PPSA) and sent to all members — individual, departmental, and institutional.

For subscription rates for all categories of membership, see separate announcements elsewhere in this issue. Changes of address should be sent to: Dr. W. Wesley McDonald, Department of Political Science, Elizabethtown College, Elizabethtown, PA 17022. E-mail: <mcdonaldw@etown.edu> Postmaster: send notification of undelivered journals to this address. Second class postage paid at Harrisburg, PA and at additional mailing offices. Copyright 2002 by the Pennsylvania Political Science Association: ISSN 0890-2410.

COMMONWEALTH will print free of charge camera-ready official announcements of up to one page of the American Political Science Association, as well as Northeastern Political Science Association and its constituent members, and other organizations whose Journals provide corresponding privileges to PPSA. Contact the Managing Editor.

Advertising, reprint information, and rates are also available from the Treasurer of the PPSA, Dr. Thomas Brogan, Department of Political Science, Albright College, P. O. Box 15234, Reading, PA 19612-5234

The Pennsylvania Political Science Association

OFFICERS

President

Joseph Melusky (acting president)
St. Francis University

First Vice President

Joseph Melusky
St. Francis University

Second Vice President

Thomas J. Baldino
Wilkes University

Treasurer

Thomas Brogran
Albright College

Secretary

W. Wesley McDonald
Elizabethtown College

EXECUTIVE COUNCIL

2003-2006

Francis Moran
New Jersey City University

Mary Jane Kuffner Hirt
Indiana University of Pennsylvania

2002-2005

Bridget Jeffrey
Edinboro University

Stanley Berard
Lock Haven University

2001-2004

Michael Cassidy
Pennsylvania House of Representatives

Jean Wahl Harris
University of Scranton

EX OFFICIO MEMBERS

Past President

Craig M. Wheeland
Villanova University

Commonwealth Associate Editors

Thomas J. Baldino
Wilkes University

Commonwealth Managing Editor

Harold Cox
Wilkes University

Donald G. Tannenbaum
Gettysburg College

Commonwealth Editor

Gerard J. Fitzpatrick
Ursinus College

In the COMMONWEALTH

Gerard J. Fitzpatrick, Editor

It seems fitting that four of the five articles in this volume of the Pennsylvania Political Science Association's professional journal concern politics in Pennsylvania. Moreover, these Pennsylvania focused pieces speak to a variety of political science subfields, including political economy, presidential elections, voting behavior, and state government. Providing some topical balance while further extending the fields of interest addressed in this issue of COMMONWEALTH, the one non-Pennsylvania essay involves international relations and political theory. In short, ours may be a small journal but it consistently covers much academic territory.

In our lead article, Dr. Gordon P. Henderson underscores the connections between political philosophy and international politics by exploring the thought of Immanuel Kant with regard to the place of morality in foreign affairs. He not only illuminates the theoretical tension between the moral and the political on the world stage, but he also brings these abstract ideas to bear on the contemporary debate between "realists" and "idealists" in foreign affairs. Kant's teachings, Dr. Henderson concludes, support a cautious optimism with regard to the prospects for peace among nations.

Among the most contentious topics in recent years has been the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA). Dr. Paul G. Kengor and R. C. Phinney examine the impact of NAFTA on Pennsylvania. They find that despite the claim of critics that the treaty would harm the state's economy by causing an exodus of manufacturing jobs to foreign nations, NAFTA has in fact helped Pennsylvania by significantly increasing its overseas exports. While their findings do not resolve the debate over job losses or other controversial aspects of NAFTA, they indicate that there is more to the free trade debate than meets the eye.

One of the most significant developments in presidential electoral politics has been the recent trend toward "frontloading," the process whereby states schedule their presidential primaries increasingly early in hope of having more influence in determining the party nominees. Through a comparison of Pennsylvania and Ohio in the presidential nominating process, Dr. James E. Vike explains why our state has eschewed the frontloading trend, even though scheduling presidential primaries earlier would likely increase candidate competitiveness, campaign activity, voter choice, and voter turnout.

Berwood Yost explains why Republicans control most statewide offices in Pennsylvania, as well as both houses of the state legislature, even though Democrats have a decided edge in voter registration. Using a random survey of Pennsylvania voters to probe the difference between party orientation and party registration, he finds that more Democrats in Pennsylvania identify with the Republican Party than vice versa, indicating that party identification is a better predictor of voting behavior than is party registration. He also identifies some intriguing geographic patterns in the distribution of these "misaligned voters."

This issue of COMMONWEALTH closes with a special feature: the address of former Pennsylvania House Speaker Herbert Fineman to the 2003 meeting of the Pennsylvania Political Science Association, with commentary by Michael Cassidy. Few people know our state legislature as well as Mr. Cassidy does, for he has worked there for a quarter of a century as a member, staff assistant, and scholar. In his commentary, he traces the crucial role Speaker Fineman played in bringing about institutional reform in Pennsylvania, and he places reform developments in the state within the context of the larger legislative modernization movement.

As always, this issue of COMMONWEALTH would not have been possible without quality submissions and quality reviews. I therefore extend my deepest thanks to the authors and anonymous referees with whom I have worked during the past year. By contributing their time and talent, they have helped to make ours an ever better professional journal. Unfortunately, we continue to receive only a small number of manuscripts, most of which are rejected. If issues of COMMONWEALTH as strong as this one are to be produced in a timely manner, readers must submit their work for consideration and urge their colleagues to do so too.